Everyday, the work of the philanthropic sector affects the lives of millions of Americans. That’s why it is critical that foundation leaders take an active role in shaping public policy by building relationships with their members of Congress. Lawmakers need to know more about the work that foundations and corporate giving programs do in their states and districts.

To help in this initiative, Congress created a Philanthropy Caucus—a bipartisan effort in the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate. The Congressional Philanthropy Caucus in the House is co-chaired by Representative John Lewis (D-GA), chair of the House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Oversight and Representative Patrick J. Tiberi (R-OH). The Senate counterpart, the Senate Philanthropy Caucus, is co-chaired by Senators Charles Schumer (D-NY) and Richard Burr (R-NC).

To date, there are 36 members in the House caucus and 5 in the Senate. (The Congressional Philanthropy Caucus was formed in July 2007; the Senate Philanthropy Caucus was established in July 2008.)

The caucus:

- informs members of Congress and Congressional staff about the important role that foundations play in our communities and around the globe
- identifies issues of mutual interest to the philanthropic sector and lawmakers
- raises awareness about legislative issues affecting foundations, such as the recent changes to donor-advised funds and supporting organizations
