

Jeffrey Liebman is Executive Associate Director and Chief Economist at the Office of Management and Budget. He is on leave from his position as the Malcolm Wiener Professor of Public Policy at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University where he teaches courses in public sector economics and American economic policy. In his research, he has studied tax and budget policy, social insurance, poverty, and income inequality. Recent research has examined the impacts of government programs such as the Earned Income Tax Credit, Social Security, and housing vouchers. In the Clinton Administration, Liebman served from 1998-1999 as Special Assistant to the President for Economic Policy at the White House National Economic Council. Liebman received his BA from Yale University and his PhD in economics from Harvard.